

British Phycological Society
Officer: Professor Graham Underwood RSB representative Winter Meeting January 5 th 2022
The BPS is a full organisational member of the Royal Society of Biology (RSB). The RSB is a single unified voice for biology: advising Government and influencing policy; advancing education and professional development; and encouraging public interest in the life sciences. We receive various notifications of events and training, which are passed to Council member and Society members where appropriate. Events are mainly based in London. The BPS will remain a member of the RSB in 2022.